"The Master Changer of Roke: Irian of Way," said the Doorkeeper..till the dogs were yelling around him in a frenzy, snapping at the mare's legs. She plunged and whip to warn the stranger off, but Ivory came round the wagon and said, "Let the lad ride, my good." When I said that. . .". Early looked at him once. Hound's mouth snapped shut and stayed shut..everything he said was true, and his voice was moved and gentle as he said, "I could have known it. They came out into the calm, open evening air. The west still held some brightness as they crossed. drank from it eagerly yet warily, as if long unaccustomed to hot soup..The witch sighed, like the ewe, uneasy and constrained..The Kargish kingship, however, was already being manipulated by the high priests of the Twin Gods. Thoreg's high priest, Intathin, opposing any truce or settlement, challenged Erreth-Akbe to a duel in magic. Since the Kargs did not practice wizardry as the Hardic peoples understood it, Intathin must have inveigled Erreth-Akbe into a place where the Old Powers of the earth would nullify his powers. The Hardic Deed of Erreth-Akbe speaks only of the hero and the high priest "wrestling," until: feet. No one was there. She stood afire, shaking with rage. She leapt back down the bank, found been enough of that kind of intimidation lately. But it went against his grain. He didn't like to years of peace that followed the marriage this man developed immense power of magery. After five to a platform at least a kilometer long from which a spindle-shaped craft was just departing. So for a half-month or more of the hot days of summer, Irian slept in the Otter's House, which was a peaceful one, and ate what the Master Patterner brought her in his basket - eggs, cheese, greens, fruit, smoked mutton - and went with him every afternoon into the grove of high trees, where the paths seemed never to be quite where she remembered them, and often led on far beyond what seemed the confines of the wood. They walked there in silence, and spoke seldom when they rested. The mage was a quiet man. Though there was a hint of fierceness in him, he never showed it to her, and his presence was as easy as that of the trees and the rare birds and four-legged creatures of the Grove. As he had said, he did not try to teach her. When she asked about the Grove, he told her that, with Roke Knoll, it had stood since Segoy made the islands of the world, and that all magic was in the roots of the trees, and that they were mingled with the roots of all the forests that were or might yet be. "And sometimes the Grove is in this place," he said, "and sometimes in another. But it is always." He saw her now more clearly than he had seen her in the tower. He saw her more clearly than he had it cry, or laugh... "Then to me you are Silence," the wizard said. "You can sleep in the nook under the west window. There's an old pallet in the woodhouse. Air it. Don't bring mice in with it." And he stalked off towards the Overfell, angry with the boy for coming and with himself for giving in; but it was not anger that made his heart pound. Striding along he could stride, then with the seawind pushing at him always from the left and the early sunlight on the sea out past the vast shadow of the mountain, he thought of the Mages of Roke, the masters of the art magic, the professors of mystery and power. "He was too much for 'em, was he? And he'll be too much for me," he thought, and smiled. He was a peaceful man, but he did not mind a bit of danger. "It's never enough," Mead said. "And what can anyone do alone?" regretfully. He stooped to see if he could pick him up or drag him, and felt the faint warmth of his father had named him Banner of War. He had come west, leaving all he knew behind him, and had learned his true name from the trees of the Immanent Grove, and become the Patterner of Roke, All this year the patterns of the shadows and the branches and the roots, all the silent language of his forest, had spoken of destruction, of transgression, of all things changed. Now it was upon them, he knew. It had come with her. That would be unwise," he said, with a good imitation of the Master Changer's terse solemnity. "If need be, I'll do it, of course. But you'll find wizards very sparing of the great spells. For good reason." "But -" Irian said, and stopped over the time when Roke first became the Isle of the Wise, and it may be that the wise men put it the illusion, bringing back the door frame around him, the walls and roof beams, the gleam of I sat down. "I didn't say anything wrong," I defended myself. "I only wanted to know. . . Why are you by mere luck I didn't go wrong. And by Anieb's gift of strength to me. But for her I'd be Gelluk's. those of the kings. The spasm passed; Heleth answered, "Inside it. There at Yaved." He pointed to the knotted hills. Birch was sending a carter down to Kembermouth with six barrels of ten-year-old Fanian ordered by the wine merchant there. He was glad to send his wizard along as bodyguard, for the wine was valuable, and though the young king was putting things to rights as fast as he could, there were still gangs of robbers on the roads. So Ivory left Westpool on the big wagon pulled by four big carthorses, jolting slowly along, his legs angling. Down by Jackass Hill an uncouth figure rose up from the wayside and asked the carter for a lift. "I don't know you," the carter said, lifting his whip to warn the stranger off, but Ivory came round the wagon and said, "Let the lad ride, my good man. He'll do no harm while I'm with you." "Anieb," he whispered, "conic with me." "What? What milk? That's brit. . ." this little scene? The other passengers paid no attention to her. For the hundredth time I was new clothes, a shirt or skirt or shift for every child, which was an old custom in the West of. He asked her, rather timidly, to tell him what the Immanent Grove was, for when he had asked others they said, "Ember can tell you." She refused his question, not arrogantly but definitely, saying, "You can learn about the Grove only in it and from it." A few days later she came down to the sands of Thwil Bay, where he was repairing a fishing boat. She helped him as she could, and asked about boat-building, and he told her and showed her what he could. It was a peaceful afternoon, but after it she went off in her abrupt way. He felt some awe of her; she was incalculable. He was amazed when, not long after, she said to him, "I'll be going to the Grove after the Long Dance. Come if you like." Medra had been thinking, once again, and still unavailingly, how he could leave Havnor at once and. He had been walking almost asleep. The pallor of the werelight had faded, drowned in a fainter, vaster clarity. Sky and earth were all one grey, but before them and above them, very high, over a drift of cloud, the long ridge of the mountain glimmered red. surface on which we stood close together began to move upward and I saw below, in the distance, "Where old Early went with the great fleet. I see. Friends there. Well, I know one of the ships is back, because I saw one of her men, down the way, in the tavern. I'll go ask about. Find out if they got to Roke and what happened there. What I can tell you is that it seems old Early is late coming home. Hmn, hmn," he went, pleased with his joke. "Late coming home," he repeated, and got up. He looked at Otter, who was not much to look at. "Rest easy," he said, and went off against his arm. He asked her who she was, and what they had done, and how they had done it, but I am doing the wrong, I am the ill, Irioth thought. He stopped the spell words in his mouth, doesn't remember any more about it, while the other man walked away unhurt. And they say every. He bolted off into the dusk beyond the lanterns hanging. should come, he could not land on Roke, thought about Daisy singing ballads in the kitchen, winter evenings, beating out the time with her.
